. J. BECKER & J. PETERS, Early Christian Worship, pp. 5-8. 56 b) One of the ancient religions of the world was in India. In this religion we find important similarities to the Christian religion. For example, both religions believed that God wanted to communicate with people through visions. In the Hindu religion, the gods would appear and reveal their word to man, while in the Christian religion God himself was thought to appear to man. According to the Hindu religion, there were different kingdoms of gods, each of them ruling over one of the planets. For example, the kingdom of the moon was under the control of the moon god, and the kingdom of the sun was under the control of the sun god. According to Hinduism, God created man to serve as a messenger to the gods. Hinduism further teaches that God is different from the gods. According to Hinduism, God is more powerful than all the gods. While the gods are formed by God, human beings cannot create gods. In the Buddhist religion, the Buddha was thought to be God's best creation. In addition, Buddha preached a teaching of self-mastery. It was through self-mastery that human beings could achieve perfect wisdom. The world was described as being made up of five categories of beings. The five categories of beings were animals, humans, heavenly beings, infernal beings, and hell beings. We can observe in the Buddhist religion a comparison between the heavenly beings and the humans. For example, the heavenly beings did not eat flesh, while humans had to have the flesh of animals to survive. In the Buddhist religion, people with good qualities could become heavenly beings. According to Buddhism, man has the ability to liberate himself from hell beings. However, since there is no difference between man and the hell beings, Buddhism teaches that people with bad qualities would fall to hell. According to Buddhism, life is a cycle. Man is born, grows up, and dies. At the end of man's life, he falls to hell or he is reborn in another life as a heavenly being. The Buddhist religion offers the ideal of the gradual liberation from the cycle of life. c) In the Grecian religion, there was a big difference between those in the upper and lower classes. The children of the upper classes grew up without any teaching in the manner of the lower classes. In the Grecian religion, the deities manifested themselves as a result of the belief in the divinities. In this religion, a goddess 82157476af
